VOL. 1, NO. 1

EASTERN WASHINGTON UNIVERSITY

WINTER 1985

The proposed merger of Eastern Washington University into Washington State University created headlines in the region. Fueled by media attention, cries of turf wars made last year one of anticipation for both schools. Would EWU join forces with WSU?

The end result was a recommendation by a specially appointed legislative committee: Let the two institutions merge governing boards while maintaining separate institutional identities, and establish a joint graduate center in Spokane.

Actually, the recommendation is only one of many possibilities being presented to the 1985 State Legislature. The legislature is concerned with more than the cries of turf wars coming from the Eastern Washington region.

Washington is facing an unprecedented concern and uncertainty over the future management of higher education in the state. The statewide Council for Postsecondary Education (CPE) as it now exists lacks authority to control the direction of higher education. And as a result, some legislators think Washington's colleges and universities plan and operate a little too independently. Whatever the legislature decides in its 1985 session may set the framework for statewide educational changes.

Eastern strongly agrees that changes have to be made. What is needed is a strong central board—a strengthened version of the CPE—that will set educational policies for the state and still allow each university to remain autonomous.

As it exists now, the CPE has not effectively managed Washington's educational network. Approximately 150,489 students attend the state's six four-year institutions and 27 community colleges. Another 23,000 students attend the 16 independent institutions in Washington. Each school has its own board planning its budget and academic programs, subject to CPE review. CPE has specific authority to approve new degree programs, registration of out of state institutions and Washington Scholars program. However, CPE essentially acts in an advisory role.

Several bills are being introduced to the legislature this session. The alternatives range from abolishing CPE and creating a "superboard of state regents" to the merger of EWU and WSU. CPE wants to remain in business, but it needs the authority to back its recommendations.

Dramatic changes like a merger may be eye-catching, but they aren't practical or realistic. No one at Eastern wants to fight a turf war. What we want to do is to continue to provide Spokane with the tools it needs to advance its economic, educational and cultural options.

The legislature is looking beyond Spokane's unique needs. We're only part of the overall problem. We do believe that a stronger CPE will help Eastern and the rest of the state's schools. It could be the practical answer to what legislators see as an out-of-control educational situation.

Merger It's Not The Only Answer

WSU EWU WSU

Higher Education Choices

The 3609 Committee

- Keep local boards of regents and trustees
- Conduct a needs assessment with special attention to Spokane, Seattle, Tri-Cities and Vancouver-Longview
- Identify roles and missions for each institution
- Approve new programs and off-campus facilities

Joint Legislative Advisory Committee on Higher Education Governance, Tuition, Fees and Financial Aid

(Holds the broadest legislative support)

- Create a new coordinating commission and retain the local boards of regents and trustees
- Prepare a comprehensive master plan
- Review and recommend budget requests from the four-year schools and the community college system

Higher Education Coordination Study Committee

- Recommended merging the governing boards of EWU and WSU while maintaining the separate identities of the two schools. The committee also recommended establishing a joint higher education center in Spokane.

Senator McDermott's Proposal

- Create a new state board of regents and retain local boards
- Set salaries for presidents of each institution
- Recommend each institution's budget, consistent with state-wide plan

CPE Policy Recommendations

- Set state's objectives for higher education
- Reaffirm and establish responsibility for: Enrollment, admission, tuition
- Coordination of off-campus and inter-institutional activities

Recommendations from CPE Sunset Audit

- Replace CPE with a State Board of Regents for Higher Education
- Submit a single budget for all institutions
- Prepare a comprehensive master plan
- Develop mission statements for each institution

Exploring Mayan Caves

BORIS WEINTRAUB
NATIONAL GEOGRAPHIC SOCIETY

It took a 20-kilometre walk through the jungles of Belize, carrying backpacks weighing up to 40 kilograms just to reach the cave entrance. The explorers had to take the excruciating journey, as many as three days in a row, just to haul in supplies and gear.

Once there, they camped underground for weeks at a time, eating only freeze-dried food and getting water from an underground spring. But for Thomas Miller, EWU assistant professor of Geology, and his colleagues, the effort was worth it. When the expedition emerged from the sweltering jungle last May, it had found one of the most extensive cave systems in the Western hemisphere.

Dr. Miller, who has been studying caves since 1973, tends to belittle the physical difficulties of the trip. "We camped in a large chamber that had a permanent stream falling into a large lake where we could get water and also wash off. There were about 33 Maya walls and terraces built into the cave, and we camped on these flat areas. It was an extremely comfortable trip."

As for the hike in, said Dr. Miller, "People got in shape quickly."

He went to the Chiquibul River area after studying aerial photographs that suggested an extensive karstic system was there. A karst, he explained, is a region of porous limestone cut by water into various forms such as caves.

An eight-day solo journey in 1982 confirmed his judgment, and he began to plan for his 1984 expedition.

The result was the discovery and mapping of a cave system that consisted of two distinct caves, each about 11 km long. "The whole cave system is basically due to the Chiquibul River, which sank millions of years ago in the limestone and formed a very large cave system," Dr. Miller explained.

Most of the Maya region of Central America, from southern Mexico through Guatemala and Belize, has such karstic caves. What makes the Chiquibul caves special is their size. The chamber in which the team first camped is about 240 metres long and more than 150 wide. Even that, however, was no match for the second chamber, which was about twice that size.

It would swallow the biggest room at Carlsbad (New Mexico) and still have a third left over," Miller said. "The ceiling is 213 ft. (65m) high."

The team found evidence of extensive use of the cave by the Maya. They left large quantities of pots, storage vessels, painted bowls, clay figures and even a whistle that can still be played.

Fortunately for the scientists, the area is almost completely isolated. Looters who have stripped other Maya sites have done little damage here. Only have a few loggers and chicle tappers have been in the area in the millennium since the last Maya left the caves.

The accumulation of discoveries, dated between 600 AD and 1000 AD, contain clues to everyday Maya life. Miller's expedition brought out about 50 kg. of artifacts and returned with them to Belmopan, the capital of Belize. Scientists estimate the Miller expedition carried out only one percent of the artifacts in the cave, leaving behind a tremendous legacy.

SCHOLARSHIPS

SCHUMACHER Twelve EWU students have been awarded continuing and new scholarships by the Herman Oscar Schumacher Scholarship fund. The $500 awards aid young men who have completed at least one year in college.

KEITH KELLY Trustee emeritus Andy Kelly presented President George Frederickson with a $4,000 contribution to the Keith Kelly Memorial Scholarship, named for the former trustee's son. The scholarship is for radio-television majors.

Trustee emeritus Andy Kelly presents contribution check for Keith Kelly Scholarship fund to President Frederickson

NELLIE M. GALE A new award, the Nellie M. Gale Scholarship, was recently established through the Foundation as a general academic award.

ALUMNI The Alumni Association is offering its annual scholarships to undergraduates and graduates. To apply, send a letter of application to the Alumni Office by March 1st. The award is for one-quarter tuition.

HOMECOMING

Homecoming '84 was a combination win for Eastern and the state of Washington. The Eagles took home the first annual Governor's Cup with a 32-25 victory over the Idaho Vandals. Playing before a crowd of 10,213 at Joe Albi Stadium in Spokane, the Eagles opened the game with a 103-yard kickoff return. Washington's Governor John Spellman was on hand to inaugurate the cup competition.

During halftime, in a salute to the gold, Eastern paid tribute to two alums: Wanda Oliver Jewell, '76, who took a bronze in the Summer Olympic small bore rifle competition, and Karen Farmer, gold medalist and world record setter at the Olympics for the physically handicapped. The crowning of Homecoming Queen Candi Ware rounded off the halftime ceremonies.

The celebration inside Albi stadium wasn't the only party in town. The night before, Eastern joined forces with Expo + 10 at the Ridpath Hotel where alumni, students, faculty and Spokane citizens danced to the EWU Big Band Sound. The weekend wound down with the traditional Homecoming dance at the Davenport Hotel.

SPORTS

Highlights

All-American candidate Lisa Comstock is leading the women's basketball team toward the Mountain West Conference tournament and a possible first championship for the Eagles. The team drew the largest basketball crowd ever in the Inland Empire with its 64-59 win over the Idaho Vandals.

Senior guard Lisa Comstock ranked 16th in assists and sophomore center Brenda Souther finished sixth in blocks in 1984 statistics compiled by Women's Basketball Yearbook. Eastern finished 13th in field goal percentage and 23rd in blocks.

Joe Folda, the senior assistant, will succeed Dr. Jerry Krause as Eastern Washington University men's basketball coach following the 1985 season. Folda has been an EWU assistant coach for five seasons, including 1983, when he led EWU through an 17-11 campaign as interim coach in its final season as a member of NCAA Division II while Krause took a sabbatical leave.

Former EWU shortstop Jim Wasem underwent arthroscopic examination of his injured left knee. Wasem is with the San Francisco Giants organization.

The Eagle Athletic Association added a new board member, Mark Kuipers, a teacher at Argonne Junior High School.

Senior Melvin Bradley (Chicago) is the first three-time captain of EWU men's basketball.

Women's volleyball coach Barbara Moe resigned after the Eagles finished the '84 season with a 5-31 record.

There were 17,145 fans in the stands to watch Boise State defeat Eastern in Boise—the largest crowd in history to see an EWU football game.

Cindy Halseth makes her debut as the women's gymnastic coach as Eastern tries to bounce back from two successive injury-marred seasons.

Eastern's sister school, Dongguk University of Seoul, Korea, sent its baseball team to the United States for games against EWU, Gonzaga University, Washington State University and USC. Dongguk is the first university sports' team from the Republic of Korea to visit the United States. The Eagles earned a split in the two-game series.

Football Makes the Adjustment.

The EWU football team ended its first season as a NCAA Division 1-AA team with a 7-2-1 record. Although the team fell short of a playoff berth, hopes for next year are high. Only 14 of 56 lettermen ended their collegiate career.

Coach Dick Zornes gave the Eagles high marks for their season play. "We played pretty well all the time. I thought at the beginning of the season that, if we jelled, we had a chance to make the playoffs." Eastern saw its hopes for an at-large playoff berth die when Nevada-Reno took advantage of Eagle mistakes to win 35-21 in Reno. Eastern's other loss came to Boise State. EWU did beat the Big Sky champion, Montana State. Prior to the Reno game, Eastern was ranked for the first time as a Division 1-AA member, sharing 20th place in the Lexington Herald-Leader poll.

Zornes said the team played with consistency. "Our kicking game contributed to our winning as much as anything. We were a big-play team on offense and on defense. Because we didn't allow teams to score a lot, much of the yardage against us had little meaning to the outcome of the game."

ARTS

WILLOW SPRINGS IN NATIONAL SPOTLIGHT Eastern's literary magazine, Willow Springs, brought the work of Michelle Huneven into print during 1984. Her fiction piece, "The Foot" was one of six winners of the 1984 General Electric Foundation Awards for Younger Writers. Ms. Huneven received $5000 and Willow Springs received $1000. Over 110 literary magazines nominated 190 writers for the prestigious award.

TRADING THEATRICAL TALENT In a first-time exchange, EWU and Gonzaga University traded theatrical directors for a quarter. Gene L. Engene, associate professor of Theatre at EWU, directed "View from the Bridge" at Gonzaga.

Gene L. Engene

ACADEMICS

HEADCOUNT HIGH The 1984 school year opened with Eastern's highest enrollment—8,527. However, students took fewer credit hours and the number of full-time students dropped by 31 from last year.

ALUMNI

NEW DIRECTORS Six new directors were elected onto the Alumni Association Board. Congratulations to Jeff Skeesick, School of Business; Karen Raver, School of Health Sciences; Lori Farnell, College of Letters and Sciences; Ralph Riddick, School of Social Work; Lynne Niel, School of Fine Arts; Robert Trask; Jim Garland; and Joe Mosebar.

CONTINUING EDUCATION AN ALUMNI CONCERN One of the most requested services by alums is information on continuing education. The Higher Education Center offers a range of master's programs with class schedules geared for the working professional. For more information, call the Center at 458-6401. Advisors from the various programs have office hours at the Center.

Regional classes are offered in the Tri-Cities, Moses Lake, Wenatchee, Walla Walla, Colville, Omak and a telecourse for teachers can be seen in the KXLY viewing area. Undergraduate and graduate degree programs are offered. For more information, call toll-free 1-800-922-8819.

HEC

EXHIBIT Life size marble sculptures by Spokane physician Edward V. Johnston made an impressive October art exhibit in the lobby of the EWU Higher Education Center in downtown Spokane. The show was co-sponsored by the School of Fine Arts, the EWU Associated Students and the EWU Gallery Program.

LECTURE The Publishing Culture, a unique lecture series sponsored by the Creative Writing Program, debuted at the Higher Education Center. The series brought nationally recognized authors, editors and literary agents together to discuss American publishing.

CHRISTMAS TREE LIGHTS UP HOLIDAY SEASON Downtown Spokane celebrated the start of the holiday season with the lighting of the largest non-commercial Christmas tree at the Higher Education Center. The 24-foot ponderosa pine was the collection point for gifts and toys which were distributed to children in Spokane hospitals Christmas Eve.

FOUNDATION

THANK YOUS EWU Foundation of officers for 1984-85 extend their thank-you to all alums and friends of the university who generously supported the University Fund.

This year's officers are: Jim Shideler, chairman; Jim Kirschbaum, vice chairman; Toby Wolf, secretary; and Fred Johns, treasures. Herman Swartz of Spokane has been elected to the Foundation board as a director.

Over $5,000 in pledges was received during the Foundation's fall phonothon. Thanks for your support!

COMMUNITY

MEDICAL TELECONFERENCE

Eastern, the Spokane County Medical Library and the CEIBA-GEIGE Corp. sponsored a medical lecture program featuring Dr. Ake Hjalmarson. The Swedish physician has done major research on metoprolol in acute myocardial infarction. This drug reduces the mortality rate for heart attack victims.

INSTITUTE OPENS The Institute for Urban and Local Studies opened at the Higher Education Center. A part of Eastern's School of Public Affairs, the self-funded institute makes university resources available to government agencies, local and regional planners and private industry.

WITTSTRUCK MEMORIAL A memorial to Stephan Wittstruck was dedicated with a tree-planting ceremony in the Fine Arts courtyard. Stephen was a '81 RTV major. Stephan's mother, his sisters and their families planted a Washington Hawthorne tree near a bench and plaque installed earlier. The family wishes to thank those who helped with this Foundation donation.

CONFERENCE EXAMINES REGIONAL WATER CONCERNS

Over 200 participants attended a water quality management conference sponsored by EWU in September. Leaders from various environmental agencies examined the future of shared water management by western Montana, Northern Idaho and Eastern Washington.

COMBING THE ARCHIVES EWU received a $40 thousand federal grant to survey and appraise over 10 truckloads of old City of Spokane documents. The grant is from the National Historical Publications and Records Commission. Jay Rea, EWU archivist, will direct the research.

BUSINESS

INCUBATION CENTER BOOSTS SPOKANE Starting a new business, especially a small one, is a nurturing process. Most small businesses encounter some type of management or financial difficulty during their first few years.

To help Spokane's businesses over the initial hard spots, Eastern, the City of Spokane and Spokane County established the Spokane Business and Technology Incubation Center (SBTIC). Located in the Spokane International Airport Business Park, the Center helps fledgling businesses take advantage of inexpensive office space and administrative and technical support services without making a major monetary investment. Tenants will move in early spring.

Besides offering a supportive environment, the Center will give Spokane an economic boost. Successful small businesses will provide the city with additional jobs.

The city, county and EWU recently received a local development matching fund grant of $19,766 for the Center.

Several different departments at Eastern will work with tenants: the Small Business Development Center, the Center for Technological Development, the School of Mathematical Sciences and Technology, the School of Business, the Bureau of Business Research and the Center for Extended Learning.
